INVITATION: THREE-PART WEBINAR COURSE: INTRODUCTORY STATISTICS FOR BIOMEDICAL RESEARCHERS IN THE COLLEGE OF HEALTH SCIENCES

The presentations are especially directed at colleagues who:

- Have little or no knowledge of statistics
- Have knowledge but do not feel confident about this, and above all, those who...
- Have previously attended statistics workshops but left feeling that they really weren't following what was being said!

WHEN

- Session 1: Mon 22 Jun 3-5 pm
- Session 2: Thurs 24 Jun 3-5 pm
- Session 3: Frid 26 Jun 3-5pm

FORMAT

- Three two-hour Zoom webinar sessions over one week.

CONTENTS

- The focus is on achieving a real understanding of the concept of statistical significance, and the implications of this for medical research
- Followed by discussion leading to an understanding of the principles and purpose of the commonly used tests, particularly Student's t test, ANOVA, non-parametric tests, chi-squared tests, correlation and regression
- With emphasis on the interplay between these, sample size, effect size and power of a study.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Postgraduate students and staff with an interest in research.
